MGallery Collection Hotel Cour du Corbeau named best hotel in France by TripAdvisor

The MGallery Collection's Hotel Cour du Corbeau was named "Best hotel in France" by the TripAdvisor website on Wednesday January 16. This "Travelers' Choice Awards®" ranking is drawn up every year based on the reviews, opinions and ratings provided on TripAdvisor by the travelers themselves.

This historical mansion and haven of peace is tucked away in the narrow cobbled lanes of Strasbourg's old city center, just a stone's throw from Notre-Dame Cathedral. Cour du Corbeau was declared a listed historical monument in 1930 and it is definitely no ordinary building. The establishment's ten edifices with their walkways, passages, nooks and stairways feature the many architectural details that give the hotel its unique personality.

"We are proud and very honored to receive this award. It highlights the excellent quality of our teams' work and daily efforts to satisfy guests. The hotel's unique setting, history and infrastructures and the services offered by MGallery are probably the reasons why this hotel is so appreciated by guests," explains Anne Gerber, General Manager of Hotel Cour du Corbeau.

The hotel has 57 spacious rooms and suites decorated in a revisited 16th century style that ensures all modern comforts. The rooms boast "romantic interiors" with classical furnishings, for example Louis XV armchairs upholstered in modern mauve, pink and grey fabrics. Some rooms with sloping ceilings have timeless charm. "Many of our guests are curious about the building's history and also want to know about its former owners," observes Anne Gerber. To answer their questions fully, all of the hotel's employees have received a lesson about the key moments in the building's history. "Telling the story of Cour du Corbeau is part of providing an efficient and memorable welcome and thus fulfilling the MGallery collection's promise."
